

Anew School of Facilitation in Cape Town

Join us as we explore the most powerful leadership skill of our time.

Facilitation is the art of creating an environment for independent thinking and quality engagement whenever people gather around a clear purpose. When we facilitate, we take responsibility for one of the most fundamental, but so often overlooked human endeavours: the ability to gather well. For us, gathering well means that our collective interactions feel connected, clear, impactful and worthy of our time and energy. We know that such gatherings change organisations for the better, and are powerful drivers of impact in the world.

Skilful facilitation therefore can transform teams and organisations. And since so many of us spend much of our lives gathering, facilitation is not just a skill for facilitators.

We created the School of Facilitation – a 4-day, in-person learning experience - to enable and support individuals who are interested in:

- Learning how to gather people in refreshed ways, regardless of the type of event or programme;
- Designing transformative and empathy-based learning journeys;
- Exploring different methodologies to enable better thinking, connection and lead to clearer outcomes;
- Learning ways to work with the typical challenges that can occur when we gather;
- Working with the always present deeper drivers of human behaviour - like emotions, personal narratives, assumptions and hidden values; and,
- Working with their own purpose and way of being as a facilitator.

"Life changing, relationship building, energising and empowering. So applicable to almost every aspect of life no matter who you are."

~ Mariel McLellan,
Head of Business and Projects Advisory, Freethinking

The Anew School of Facilitation is attended by individuals in diverse roles from all over the world, among them start-up founders, coaches, full or part-time facilitators, corporate leaders, activists and leaders from the NGO and political spheres, Design Thinking practitioners, young leaders, and staff members from universities and other academic institutions.
